Press Release

Free Heirs' Property and Land Use Seminar

Florence, SC. On Thursday August 3, from 5-6 PM, The Florence Section National Council of Negro Women is sponsoring a free Heirs' Property and Land seminar that is open to the public. This public service seminar will take place at the Drs. Bruce and Lee Foundation public library located at 509 S Dargan Street in Florence, SC.

The seminar will be conducted by professional expert members of the Center for Heirs' Property Preservation who will give the citizens of Florence information about their legal rights and the risks within the Heirs' Property and Sustainable Forest Program. The members of the Center for Heir's Property Preservation will specifically discuss forestry education and services to help landowners know the value of managing their forestland for greater income and how to increase generational wealth from their property. The seminar will also offer information pertaining to legal education and direct legal services to help families reach agreements, clear title to family land, and probate estates. Additionally, the Center for Heir's Property Preservation will be available to inform landowners how to get federal grants so that many of the improvements needed for their land are not paid for by the landowners.
